As an animator, you'll bring characters and objects to life convincingly, working closely with other creative departments to produce visually stunning sequences. You'll play an essential role in ensuring the highest quality of animation while respecting production objectives and technical constraints.

What you'll do

- Character animation: Create and refine character body and face animations using motion capture and keyframe techniques.
- Quality execution: Apply animation principles to produce animations of the highest quality, ensuring that they respect technical constraints and adapt to production teams' feedback.
- Problem identification: Identify and proactively communicate any artistic, technical or scheduling issues to the relevant stakeholders.
- Collaborative production: Work closely with technical artists and other departments to ensure seamless integration of animations into the project pipeline.

What you bring to the team:

- Advanced knowledge of Maya;
- Experience in VFX (an asset);
- In-depth knowledge of 3D animation techniques;
- Proven understanding of physical movement, weight, balance, textures and various shapes;
- In-depth knowledge of body mechanics and physics of creature/animal movement;
- In-depth understanding of frame creation platforms and configurations, animation pipelines and data transfers in the production pipeline;
- Ability to receive and implement feedback quickly and effectively;
- Excellent organizational, communication and interpersonal skills;
- Ability to foster collaboration and teamwork within the animation team as well as with other departments;
- Adaptability and willingness to learn new processes and technical skills;
- Knowledge of modeling, armature creation and Mel/Python scripting.

Our passion for innovation and our team's creativity are recognized throughout the industry and
